

Nature reserve of the Albufera & Paella Show cooking

Description: Guided visit to the nature reserve known as Parque Natural de la Albufera which is only 15 km South of Valencia. After a short drive we'll find ourselves surrounded by nature as the natural reserve comprises marshlands, woodlands, dunes and a lake. It has a high ecological value and in it there are species in danger of extinction. The marshlands contain some of the biggest rice-fields in Spain, while the lake known as La Albufera is a favourite stopover for migratory birds.

Panoramic drive on board the bus to La Albufera passing by the woods of La Dehesa and the rice fields. We arrive at the village of El Palmar, where we board our boats for our cruise on the placid lake and visit a barraca (traditional dwelling of the former fishermen and farmers of the area).

El Palmar is full of family-run and traditional restaurants where you'll be able to help and participate in the Paella cooking.
